THE SAILORS' REMEDY

Some are past: some are present: but Mellow is the smoke for all time.

First blended in 1840, Mellow instantly appealed to the smokers of that day. Since then, the long experience has brought about many improvements and increased its patrons, until now Mellow is reckoned—justly, too—the standard mixture. The height of pipe pleasure.

MURRAY'S MELLOW MIXTURE

Mellow is everything a good mixture ought to be—purely blended, cool-smoking, slow-burning, and the characteristic flavour and aroma pleases and satisfies thoroughly, and always. Mellow makes every smoker a life-long friend.

PER 7d. OUNCE

Also in 2-oz. packets and 4-oz. tins.

And Sold Everywhere.

SPORTING PARAGRAPHS.

A meeting of the Jockey Club will be held at Newmarket's on Wednesday evening next.

The late Colonel R. Alexander left a legacy of £100 to the Royal Hibernian Military School.

The value of the Middle Miles Handicap in the Stewards' Extra Three Days Meeting is increased to £600, and the Histon Taree-year-old Plate to £300, which is also the value of the Chesterton Nursery. The Mile Nursery will be worth 1,000 sovs., provided forty entries are obtained. On the concluding day £500 are offered for a selling plate for three-year-olds, the total value of the races to be decided at the Third Extra Meeting not to close upon £10,000, exclusive of the sweepstakes.

Our portrait is of Master Jackie Moore, Whose mother writes as follows:—"My little boy suffered from from tubercular Right Hip, and was in bed out of hospital for a year. He had ball match boot ball against boney, which was played in the afternoon, are given below:— After undergoing three operations, which did him no good, we decided to try your Clarke's Blood Mixture. After taking the first bottle we noticed an improvement in him, so we kept it up, and he is quite cured. Everybody we meet marvels how he got well and so many others are taking your Clarke's Blood Mixture." (Signed) Mrs. Newman, 19 Foothill road, Finsbury Park, London, N.

CURED BY

If you suffer from any such diseases as Eczema, Scrofula, Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Glandular Swellings, Boils, Pimples, Sores of any kind, Piles, Blood Poison, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Backache, Glandular Swellings, Debility, Indigestion, Constipation, Gastritis, Heartburn, Headache, Biliousness, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Depression, Loss of Appetite, Influenza, Colds, Coughs, Feverishness, Anæmia, Female Troubles, Impure Blood, Poor Complexion, Premature Decay, &c., don't waste your time and money on useless medicines and money ointments, which cannot get below the surface of the skin, but take Clarke's Blood Mixture, which you must have to be permanently cured in a medicine that will act through the blood, the only proper remedy in such matter which alone is the true cause of your suffering. Clarke's Blood Mixture is not just another medicine. It is composed of ingredients which quickly expel from the blood all impurities from whatever cause arising, and by rendering it clean and pure can be relied on to effect a complete and lasting cure.

Over 50 years' Success.

Pleasant to the taste.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

(FROM OUR MILITARY CORRESPONDENT IN IRELAND.)

The following re-distribution of the local commands in Ireland has been approved:—(a) Northern District under the command of Brigadier-General G. W. Hacket Pain, C.B., comprising Ulster and County Louth; (b) Southern District, under the command of Major-General B. J. C. Doran, C.B., with Headquarters at Cork, and comprising the Counties of Clare, Limerick, Kerry, Cork, Waterford, Tipperary, Kilkenny, and Wexford; (c) Dublin Area under the command of Colonel H. G. Kennard, with Headquarters at Lower Castle Yard, Dublin, comprising City and County of Dublin, the Mahon and Connaught Districts under the command of Major-General F. E. Sandbach, C.B., D.S.O., with Headquarters at the Curragh, comprising the rest of Ireland. Certain alterations in the staffs of the local commands have also been approved consequent upon the above re-distribution.

Captain J. J. Clarke, Royal Field Artillery, from the 59th Divisional Artillery, has been posted to No. 6 Territorial Force Artillery Training School at Luton.

Captain G. J. Newport, Royal Irish Rifles, has been appointed Staff Captain of No. 11 District, in succession to Captain R. C. Cooper, who has been ordered to join the 5th Battalion Rifle Brigade at Minster.

Lieutenant (Q.M.) R. Beattie, Army Service Corps, has been posted to Ireland on special recruiting duties, in relief of Second Lieutenant A. Egan, Army Service Corps, who has been posted to Liverpool.

Temporary Lieutenant J. McAvoy, Royal Army Medical Corps, has been posted to the Irish Command for duty.

It has been decided that members of Queen Alexandra's Imperial Military Nursing Service Reserve who have completed twelve months' service may, if they so desire, renew their contracts for six months at a time. Uniform allowance will then be issued half-yearly, £4 at home and £4 10/- abroad.

The Remount Depôt at Limerick has been closed.

HOCKEY.

HOCKEY AND THE WAR.

Mr. E. H. Nash presided at the annual meeting of the Hockey Association, held at the Grand Hotel, Holborn, London, yesterday. The annual report and balance-sheet, which were presented by Collins, Hon. Secretary of the Association, from 1907 to 1912, and also to the late Captain J. A. Lovell, Hon. Secretary at the time of his death. both men, who had been killed in action, were well known in the game. There was a balance in hand of £42. Mr. H. J. Greching, of Birmingham, was appointed secretary and a contgratulatory vote of thanks was passed to Sir Henry Smith upon his recent knighthood. Sir Henry is keenly interested in the sport, and those who play it. There will be no official hockey during the coming season.

BILLIARDS.

THE CHARITY TOURNAMENT.—Excellent play was witnessed in the third heat of the Sportsmen's Ambulance Tournament at the National Sporting Club yesterday afternoon. Reece and Newman were the competitors, and though the latter made breaks of 263 and 109, he could only make 418 to 417 of Reece, who averaged 57. Reece's breaks were 66, 347, and 125 (unfinished). Interval scores—Reece, 750; Newman, 414. Keeping up at night Reece won by 636, and to-day and to-morrow will contest the final with Inman of 3,000 up. Reece averaged 46 whilst scoring his 750, and Newman averaged 50 for 450. The Lancastrian raised his incomplete 182 to 324, and added 178, 268, and 61. Newman's best were 122, 151, and 58. Final scores—Reece, 1,200; Newman, 864.

THE PLAGUES OF MESOPOTAMIA.

HEAT AND FLIES.

(PRESS) ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

Mr. Edmund Candler, the representative of the British Press with the Expeditionary Force in Mesopotamia, writes:—

At the end of February, someone was saying that, for six weeks at any rate—between the mud and the heat, in the clear air, cloudless days and fresh nights—we were better off than our companions in France. He was of "the French school." An old campaigner in the country, one of "the Mesopotamian school," rebuked his optimism. "Touch wood," he said, "to-night I saw a fly."

There is no respite or truce in the plagues of Mesopotamia, and the only normal thing in the country on which one can count is that the plague-cycle is unbroken and continuous, that the plagues overlap.

The plagues of May are dust, heat, and flies; and the greatest of these is flies. The flies in the tents, dug-outs, and trenches, unless seen, are unbelievable. To describe them is to hazard one's reputation for truth. You cannot eat without swallowing flies. You wave your spoon of porridge in the air to shake them off; you put your biscuits and bully-beef in your pockets, and surreptitiously convey them in closed fist to your mouth—but you swallow flies all the same. They settle in clouds on everything. As I write, I cannot see the end of my pen.

At night the flies disappear, and the mosquitoes and sand-flies relieve them, completing the vicious circle.

Sand-flies are another and more insidious plague. A net with a mesh fine enough to exclude them is suffocating, and they keep one awake at night with a hose of thin acid playing on one's face.

In the last week of April we watched with apprehension the dwindling rim of snow on the Pusht-i-Kuh, knowing that when it had vanished the sun demon would attack us without truce. About this time there arrived a consignment of Cardigan jackets, in response to January's cry for warmth. Transport to Mesopotamia is slow, and friends at home, when they read that we are on the gridiron, would do well to be packing off their winter comforts. It is a country of excess; nothing is ever moderate. There is something almost Biblical in the way the gods of this ancient land have conspired to punish us. There is malice in the sky and soil. Malice of heat and drought; hunger and thirst; and flies; damp and cold and mire; flood, hurricane, and rain; fever and ague; and malice interwoven in the web of circumstance.

HEAT KILLS FLIES.

In the first week of May the old campaigner consoled us with the remark that the flies would soon be dead. "The heat kills them," he explained, "frizzles them up like wool in a flame." This by way of consolation, when it was 105 degrees in the shade, recalled that story of that fabulous stream, which, as the nigger explained, was free of alligators, the alligators being "too plenty afraid of sharks." Still, we looked forward to the heat which would kill the flies. "You'll see they will die when it gets really hot," said the old campaigner said, smiling unsympathetically at our air of relief.

"What do you call really hot?" I asked.

"Oh, about 112 degrees," is one's tent, of course, it goes up to anything. The flies won't bother you then.

The morning's work done, you lie in your tent, with the flap open and the side-flies lifted up, and gasp through the long day, waiting for the sun to go down. Your only apparel is a solar topi, or a wet towel round your head. You are clothed in dust and sweat. The thermometer runs up to 130 degrees in a tent, where the temperature is, of course, much higher than the Government standard reading. Outside one seldom wears a coat. "Force D" leads the simple life, and is brought up against elemental needs. The Mesopotamian can corrode one's pride. It is so corrosive of vanity that the Staff officer will ride abroad in his shirt sleeves innocent of red tabs. But one wears a sun guard over one's helmet, and a spine pad; for one can get sunstroke here through the small of one's back.

The persistent hot wind is better than complete stillness, though it bounces off the ground and buffets you, flinging the sand and dust in your face. You eat sand, breathe sand, lie in sand, have sand in your ears and eyes and clothes. Sandflies by night, flies by day until they shrivel up; sand and suffocation by day and night.

VARIOUS KINDS OF DISCOMFORT.

There are other kinds of discomfort, different kinds of heat—the moist and tropical heat of the swamps of the Euphrates and the Shat-al-Arab, the parched and desert heat of the Tigris and the Karun. Then there is the variety that is attendant upon insects and peculiar ailments, which often take the form of boils and eruptions. On the Karun, you may be stricken with what is locally known as "dog-rot," the legacy of some poisonous fly. The Bagdad boils and Aleppo date are other ills of the country of which one hears, though I have not encountered them. They leave a permanent impression of Mesopotamia burnt into you—a cicatrice for life.

I have not said a word as to Ahwas and the Persian oilfields, reputed to be the hottest spot in Asia. There is a place called Rahda, where I spent a night, between the Tuk-i-Rhayyat and the Imam Reza ranges. In a tent here in last August the thermometer never fell below 120 degrees for three days and nights, and it reached a maximum of 129 degrees. At Ahwas our troops are nearly all under roofs, and the miseries of last year are a memory. It was from here that the 12th Brigade made their burning march to Amara last June—an exploit of which little has been heard, but one which will be numbered with the great classic marches of history when the story of this campaign is written.

WAR NOTICES AND APPEALS.

WOMAN WORKERS WANTED.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Workers are badly needed in the Red Cross and St. John Workroom at 31 Dawson street, Dublin. The numbers here, as in all other workrooms, have sadly fallen off, as has also the supply of hospital garments coming into the Clothing Depôt. Is it possible, when our men are giving their lives for us in France and elsewhere, that the women of Dublin will not give a few hours a week to come and sew for them where all such work is provided? Is there something else the men are fighting? More clothing for the Depôt and more needlewomen for the Workroom are urgently needed.—Yours, etc.,

READING FOR THE TROOPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I shall be very grateful if you will kindly allow me to make appeal through your columns for illustrated papers and magazines for our reading rooms for the troops? There are thirteen centres in the Dublin District, including the camps at Phœnix Park and Stradbrook, where this association has erected large huts or marquees as reading and recreation rooms for the men in camp.

I shall be very grateful for any supplies which your readers can send me to this address.—Yours, etc.,

Y.M.C.A., 43 Upper Sackville street, Dublin, July 13th, 1916.

THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE FOR EMPLOYMENT OF DISCHARGED SOLDIERS AND SAILORS (MECHANICS).

The Committee desire to make a further appeal to the public for funds to carry on this good work. The object of the Committee is to find employment for men who have been, either prior to enlistment or during the war, employed on work of a mechanical nature, and since its inception a large number of men have been provided for, and in many cases fitting the Coal Strike.—The coal strike in Dublin shapes towards a termination, and matters regarding the arrival and unloading of cargoes at the port were yesterday in an easier condition. Following the increase of 2/6 a ton granted by outside firms of importers one, at least, of the regular big shipowning and coal carrying companies at the South Wall yesterday had its men back at work, a settlement having been arrived at whereby the "fillers" are to be granted an increase of 1d. per ton, from 8d. to 9d.

Foreign Trade at the Port.—Yesterday a Continental-trade steamer arrived in Dublin at the North Wall Extension with a cargo from abroad." The arrivals of such steamers in Dublin port of late have been almost as rare a the sight of the proverbial "white" blackbird, and Irish firms which deal extensively in foreign imports have presumably been short of supplies for much longer than usual.

ROYAL SCHOOL, CAVAN.

The Cavan Protestant Board of Education met on Friday, July 7th, at the Royal School, Cavan. The Bishop of Kilmore was in the chair. Also present:—Rev. Wm. McDowell, B.A.; Ven. the Archdeacon of Kilmore, M.A.; and Rev. R. D. Crowe, M.A., Hon. Sec. The report of the examiner for free scholarships under the scheme having been presented, Master George Orme, Farnham street, Cavan, and Master William Ward, Farnham, Cavan, were elected free scholars. The routine business having been transacted, the Governors made the usual inspection of the school premises, and found the general condition of the house satisfactory. The School has been absolutely free from illness during the past and previous years, which testifies to its healthy situation.

THE CROPS IN IRELAND.

ATHLONE DISTRICT.

Farmers in the Midlands are seriously alarmed at the continued wet weather, with occasionally an abnormally low temperature for this season. The most pressing problem just now is the early hay crop, which is very heavy, and which will not be improved by the delay. The potato crop is now very much in need of a spell of dry, warm weather. So far, there have been no cases of blight, but the danger is imminent. The backward state of the crop, owing to the late spring, has so far saved it from disease. Turf has been a source of great trouble. That which has been cut lies on the bog, undried, and, unless a late and dry harvest gives the opportunity for further cutting, there is the menace of a fuel famine. Late meadows, turnips, mangolds, and corn crops are doing well, and promise abundant yield, should favourable weather be given them at an early date.

BALLYHAUNIS DISTRICT.

The rapidity with which the crops in this district (and the remark applies throughout the county) have progressed during the past six weeks has completely dispelled the gloomy outlook which was preval

THE IRISH CRISIS.

STATEMENT BY LORD LANSDOWNE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I observe from a statement which appears in to-day's papers that Mr. Redmond has complained of a speech which I delivered in the House of Lords on Tuesday as to the steps which were to be taken in order to deal with the situation upon which the Hardinge Commission has commented with so much severity.

In making my statement as to the permanent character of certain provisions of the Amending Bill I did not intend to go—I do not consider that I did go—beyond the declaration made by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons on the 10th inst. that the union of the six counties with the rest of Ireland could only be brought about with, and never can be brought about without, the free will and assent of the excluded area. My statements with regard to the government of Ireland during the interval which must elapse between the present moment and the passing of the Amending Bill represented what I believed to be the views of the Government, and were made after consultation with the Prime Minister and others of my colleagues.—Yours, etc.,

LANSDOWNE.

London, July 13th, 1916.

NO DATE FIXED FOR AMENDING BILL.

In the House of Commons yesterday,

Mr. WILLIAM O'BRIEN asked the Colonial Secretary when the House might expect the Irish Amending Bill, and whether the right hon. gentleman was aware that the Irish people were in such a state of utter bewilderment as to what the proposals of the Government really were that the only way of putting an end to the suspense and ambiguity was to produce the bill on the earliest day possible.

Mr. BONAR LAW—I cannot give any date at present as to when the bill will be introduced.

Mr. O'BRIEN—Is there any objection to publishing a White Paper giving the precise terms that were submitted to Mr. Redmond and Sir Edward Carson?

Mr. BONAR LAW—There may be a difference of opinion as to the advisability of that course. I can assure the hon. member it is the intention of the Government to introduce the bill as quickly as possible.

Mr. PRINGLE—Are the Government still unanimous on the police? (Laughter.)

No answer was returned.

THE CARRISONING OF IRELAND.

Major HUNT asked whether the naval and military authorities had given, or could give, an assurance to the Government that fewer soldiers and fewer ships would be required to garrison Ireland after the Home Rule Bill had been set up during the war.

Mr. HERBERT SAMUEL—Such assurance has not been asked for, and obviously cannot be given.

CO-OPERATION IN SIBERIA.

A LESSON FOR IRELAND.

(EXCHANGE TELEGRAPH COMPANY'S SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, 12TH JULY, 1916.

The United Press to-day publishes the following article by its special correspondent in Petrograd, Mr. William Philip Simms:—

"Until now we Russians have been building upon sand. At last we are commencing to build on rock, and our work will stand."

I have just had a talk with that great friend of Russia, Nicholas Tchaykovsky, member of the Central Co-operative Committee of Petrograd, well known in the United States, where ten years ago he founded American Committees in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Denver, and elsewhere.

Tried as a revolutionist and acquitted, after being liberated from prison on bail furnished principally by English and American friends, the old man is now the happiest soul in all Russia. All his life in this tragic country, the people, he believes he is succeeding, as co-operative society organiser, in serving the masses; he feels that Russia is making real headway "on solid rock," because the foundation of the nation, the peasants—who constitute 80 per cent. of the population—are progressing.

It seems that the finishing touch at co-operation began as did the Zemstvo institutions, about 1865, shortly after serfdom was abolished and half the land turned over to the now free peasants. The actual birth of Russian co-operative credit concerns, but, though numerous, each was independent of the others, and remained for a long time quite unknown.

In 1870 Prince Wassilchikof became interested, and, with M. Yakouleff, of Moscow, founded in that city a committee for village co-operative society work, the object of which was to promote co-operative societies all over the Empire, get them started, advise them, and help them to keep going.

The Petrograd Department, as it is called, was opened seven years later, and soon outstripped the parent concern, which for many years stood practically still. The Russian Government encouraged the movement highly, and it got under way, though until recent years progress was still slow.

In the last ten years the societies have grown like mushrooms. To-day there are 16,000 of them, and, in addition to the credit co-operatives, there are agricultural (producers') and consumers' societies from one end of the country to the other.

In Siberia alone there are more than 1,500 societies, all three kinds—credit, producers', and consumers'—belonging to the Union. They own their own lines of steamers, do these Siberian societies, have their own bank in London, and despite the war, did an eighteen-million dollar business in 1915.

"You have heard a lot about one side of Siberia; what about this one?

"The growth of the Siberian co-operative societies is typical of the rest. Butter is the principal product dealt in by the peasants there, and, after they had been helped in their business by the credit society first to be formed, they felt the need of an export market. Private concerns existed in sufficiently large number there, and their methods of doing business were no cleaner, as a rule, than their butter, which was horribly putrid, and with all sorts of filthy substances and sold it as butter, and after a time the peasants, who had found markets difficult enough already, saw what little chance was for glumerous because Siberian butter had become synonymous with all that was worthless and dangerous and bad.

So dire necessity forced the formation of the agricultural co-operative society to market the honest butter made by the peasants. The Russian Government lent a hand, but for a number of years the fight was bitter, the bad butter crowd doing all it could to stifle competition.

Nor was this all. Distances are great in Siberia, and means of transportation poor. The co-operative societies were, practically, dependent upon Siberian dealers as a market. These dealers did not pay cash. They exchanged merchandise for butter, paying whatever price they pleased, and charging anything they wanted for the merchandise.

Whereupon the third branch of the co-operative society was organised—the consumers' society.

Things in Siberia then began to hum. The private butter dealers one by one closed up shop. Co-operative agents bought merchandise wholesale in the great Russian markets, and shipped it back to Siberia; they sold Siberian butter at top prices, and the peasants themselves got the difference in good, hard cash, the first they had seen in a long time.

This story can be duplicated in almost any part of Russia. For instance, flax-growers used to get 24 rubles per pood of 36 pounds. They now get 84 rubles. Tar distillers, who formerly received 3 rubles per cask; after a repetition of the Siberian experience, they are paid 6 and 7 rubles for the same quantity.

Premier Stolypin in 1907 gave a tremendous boost to co-operation, when he said the Mir, or community farms, ought to be abolished, and that the peasants were not obliged to stay in the Mir. The co-operative societies went skyrocketing after that, and have not stopped yet.

"Nor will they," Tchaykovsky said happily. "They respond to an urgent need of the peasants. Your Americans are more individualistic, your means of communication are better, you have more cities, and your communities as a rule are more thickly populated than ours. In Russia, towards the east, winters are long and hard, and in most districts along the six thousand miles from Baltic to Pacific, with our width of three thousand miles, the population is greatly spread out. We must have co-operation if otherwise the Siberian story must of necessity be repeated over and over again."

MENTIONED IN DESPATCHES.

Amongst those mentioned in General Sir Douglas Haig's recent despatches is Captain C. Croker, A.S.C., for "gallant and distinguished service in the field." He is the third son of Mr. E. J. O'B. Croker, and he went to the front with the British Expeditionary Force in August, 1914.

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

LORD LANSDOWNE AND MR. REDMOND.

Referring in a "Political Note" to Lord Lansdowne's letter, published to-day, The Times writes:—It may be inferred from this letter, the tone of which cannot but be regarded by the Nationalists as at least pacific, that the personal controversy between Lord Lansdowne and Mr. Redmond is largely the result of a misunderstanding. Lord Lansdowne says that his statements on the transition stage in Ireland represented what he believed to be the views of the Government. It is unfortunate that the Nationalist members have received the impression, of which they made no secret, that Lord Lansdowne was speaking without the authority of the Prime Minister in his allusion to "structural alterations" in the Home Rule Bill. The cloud of mystery in which Ministers, and especially Mr. Asquith, have wrapped this question is a breeding-ground for all sorts of suspicions and misconceptions.

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH.

NEW BEIT FELLOWS.

The Trustees of the Beit Fellowships for Scientific Research, which were founded and endowed three years ago by Mr. Otto Beit, to promote the advancement of science by means of research, have (says The Times) elected to the following Fellowships for 1916-17 the following:—Mr. Henry N. Walsh, B.E., of Cork (extension for a second year); Mr. William Arthur Haward, A.R.C.S., D.I.C., B.Sc., of Tufnell Park; Mr. Cyril Coldron Smith, A.R.S.M., D.I.C., B.Sc., of Bristol. Mr. Walsh was a Scholar, Medallist, and Prizeman at University College, Cork, and Assistant to Professor Alexander. Mr. Haward studied at Owens' School, Islington, from 1905-12, and has since been at the Imperial College of Science and Technology. Mr. Smith was trained at the Magnus Grammar School, Newark-on-Trent, 1905-10, and at the University of Bristol, 1910-13. He has since been at the Royal School of Mines, an integral part of the Imperial College. The three Fellows will carry on their respective researches in the Imperial College of Science and Technology.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

The advance in the Bank rate had, says The Times, a chastening effect on Stock markets yesterday, and in all departments prices gave way to some extent. The War Loan fell ¾, following the rule was English Sewing Cotton, which continued to rise on the excellent results for the past year. Business was fairly active, 3,800 bargains being recorded, as compared with 3,800 on the preceding day.

VALUE OF SCIENTIFIC TRAINING.

A number of important recommendations are contained in the lengthy interim report issued last night of the Education Consultative Committee on Scholarships for Higher Education.

At the Committee, of which the Right Hon. H. H. Dyke Acland is Chairman, deals with the "new phenomenon," which appeared in the year 1870, when the German nation began to organise itself to enter into commercial and industrial competition in markets that had for so long been in this country's pole. Then, as well on the national spirit and organisation of Germany after the war in 1870, and point out that, in building up from the bottom a great national system of industry, considerable credit, she had at her disposal the practical sense of the landowners, the learning of the professors, the power of the Government, and the national enthusiasm of the people. Great Britain had only one of these elements on her side: the practical sense and experience of her people were no doubt superior, but enthusiasm existed was aloof and disregarded. The Government had some regulative power, but no tradition of initiative. The Committee point out that unless we are prepared to spend upon education more effort, more thought, and even more money, after the war than we did before, we shall not regain or retain place among nations. It is not enough for the State to found institutions and provide scholarships: it is necessary that the managers of industry and commerce should come to know the value of scientific training in their advisers. It is necessary that scientific training should be recognised as a highly important qualification for directive posts. Then, by degrees, it may come to be understood that scientific training is an effective, though not the only, means to advancement.

Among the recommendations made by the Committee are that the system of scholarships should be judged from the point of view of the training of men and women according to their capacity that they may serve the needs of the nation in the manner for which they are best fitted; that merit is not limited to the attainment of learning; the provision of equal educational opportunity; the furtherance of industry, agriculture, and commerce being regarded as a principal need of the nation.

IN MESOPOTAMIA.

TEMPERATURE 117 DEGREES.

The Secretary of the War Office makes the following announcement:—

On July 10 a reconnaissance of our troops blew up the towers of a brigand who has been implicated in the theft of bellums (country boats). At 2 a.m. on the 11th marauders in boats attacked our boat convoy crossing the Hammar Lake. The escort drove off the assailants, who suffered some casualties.

Tigris Line—At Sanna-i-Tai the enemy's machine-guns were active during the night of the 9th-10th, and on the evening of the 11th the enemy's artillery and aircraft were both engaged in an ineffectual bombardment of our trenches. No material damage was done. On the 12th the temperature was 117 degrees.

OBITUARY.

MR. R. R. STUDDERT, J.P.

The death occurred at the County Club, Ennis, on Wednesday evening, of Mr. R. R. Studdert, J.P., formerly of Hazlewood. He was in his 80th year, and, though in feeble health, he had acted on the Grand Jury at the Assizes on the previous day. Mr. Studdert was the oldest magistrate in the County Clare, and one of the best known land agents in Ireland. Amongst the estates over which he acted were the Vandeleur estate, to the agency over which he succeeded on the death of his brother, Mr. Hallam Studdert. He was very popular with all classes.

A SUPPRESSED IRISH MEETING.

In the House of Commons yesterday,

Mr. GINNELL addressed a question to the Prime Minister regarding a meeting in the Ulster Hall, Belfast.

Mr. LEVERTON—Before the question is answered, I wish, on a point of order, to ask whether the hon. member is entitled to make use of the Order Paper of this House in order to make unfounded and dishonourable attacks upon a member of this House? The statements contained in this question could not be made by the hon. member for North Tipperary or a by the hon. member for Leeds for the simple reason that he would be brought to book. (Cheers.) The last part of the question refers to Mr. Skeffington, and, having existed was aloof and disregarded. The Government had some regulative power, but no tradition of initiative. It seems to point out that in order to meet the practical sense of the landowners, the learning of the professors, the power of the Government, and national enthusiasm of the people. Great Britain had only one of these elements on her side: the practical sense and experience of her people were no doubt superior, but enthusiasm existed was aloof and disregarded. The Government had some regulative power, but no tradition of initiative.

The SPEAKER—In reply to the hon. member's question, I have constantly reprobated references in questions which are attacks on other hon. members of the House, and I shall continue to do so as far as I can; but I am afraid I have little or no influence with hon. members who put them. With regard to attacks upon those who are not members of the House, all I can say is that I consider it an hon. member to make use of the privileges of this House in order to attack innocent people outside is one of the most despicable proceedings possible. (Cheers.)

Mr. GINNELL—The reason this question is put is because it is true. I beg to ask Question 46.

Mr. SAMUEL said there was nothing to be added to a reply given on 26th June with regard to the first part of the question. As to the latter part, Mr. Joseph Stewart, who is a temporary clerk in the service of the National Health Commissioners in Ireland, denied specifically the truth of the allegations in the question, and there was no officer named Skeffington in the employment of the Irish Commission.

Mr. GINNELL—Do you deny that the meeting announced to be held in the Ulster Hall was prevented by military and police, to my personal knowledge, for I was there; and do you claim to know more about the matter in the County Tyrone than the people in County Tyrone? (Cries of "Don't answer.")

Mr. SAMUEL—I have stated in the answer that the meeting was of a character which was regarded as connected with the rebellious movement in Ireland, which came to a head some little time ago. With regard to cheques, I have no knowledge of that matter.

Mr. GINNELL—You have not answered the last part, about the pardition.

Mr. SAMUEL—The question does not call for a reply. (Cheers.)

BRITISH LINE ADVANCED

AFTER SHARP FIGHTING.

GERMAN HOWITZERS TAKEN.

FRENCH SUCCESS IN CHAMPAGNE.

As a result of sharp infantry fighting, Sir Douglas Haig reports in last night's communiqué that the British line has been appreciably advanced at various points. During these actions Sir Douglas Haig adds that some German howitzers were taken, which will be used against the enemy when opportunity offers.

The French communiqués of yesterday report that on the Somme there was no action of importance. In Champagne the French penetrated a salient of the German lines in the region of Prosnes, and brought back prisoners. In the Argonne and elsewhere enemy attacks failed.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

BRITISH GENERAL HEADQUARTERS,

THURSDAY, 2 P.M.

There have been heavy artillery duels in certain sectors of the battle area since the last report, and fighting has continued at various points on the front; but there is no change to report in the situation on any part of the line.

West of Wytschaete and south of the La Bassée Canal the enemy attempted to raid our trenches, but was driven off in each case by our fire.

Despite the unfavourable weather, our aeroplanes have been constantly at work.

Hostile machines were active, but all their attacks on our aeroplanes operating over the German lines were driven off. One of our aeroplanes is missing.

10 P.M.

The artillery of both sides have been active throughout the day, and, as a result of sharp infantry fighting, we have not only maintained our pressure on the enemy, but have appreciably advanced our lines at various points of the battle front.

In one sector of the front we captured some German howitzers, with a quantity of ammunition, and these will be used against the enemy at a suitable opportunity.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Yesterday's Paris communiqué:—

On the front of the Somme there was an intermittent cannonade.

In Champagne we penetrated a salient of the German lines, and brought back some prisoners.

In the Argonne two surprise attacks by the enemy failed under our fire.

At La Fille Morte we exploded a mine and occupied the southern edge of the crater.

On the right bank of the Meuse there was no infantry action.

In the course of the night there was an intense bombardment in the sectors of Souville, Chênois, and La Manère.

In the Vosges an attempt by the enemy on one of our trenches was repulsed after a lively grenade struggle.

Last night's communiqué:—

Except for a fairly lively bombardment in the sector of Souville, on the right bank of the Meuse, there has been no important event to report on the front.

GERMAN OFFICIAL.

Yesterday's Berlin communiqué:—

North of the Somme the English succeeded in establishing themselves at Contalmaison. Artillery combats continue with great vigour. Yesterday again, south of the Somme, repeated French attacks were carried out astride the Barleux road and west of Estrees. They were without success, and the attacking detachments mostly had to return before our effective curtain fire with heaviest and most sanguinary losses.

East of the Meuse the artillery combat is still vigorous. We improved captured infantry positions. The number of prisoners was increased by 17 officers and 243 men to 55 officers and 2,349 men.

Near Hardaumont, on the La Bassée Canal, at the height of the Fille Morte, east of Badon-Villiers and near Hirzbach, German patrol enterprises were successful. North of Soissons a French biplane was forced to descend within our lines.

AUSTRIANS DRIVEN BACK IN DISORDER.

GOOD WORK OF ITALIANS.

Yesterday's Italian communiqué:—

In the Camonica Valley there was marked activity of the enemy's artillery, particularly in the Tonale region.

Yesterday afternoon in the Adige Valley, after an intense artillery preparation, the enemy attacked our new positions to the north of Malga Zugna, but was driven back in disorder and with heavy loss by prompt and effective concentration of fire.

On the remainder of the front to the Brenta we continued a heavy bombardment of the enemy's lines, and our infantry attacked at several points with some success. On the Isonzo nothing of importance occurred.

YOUNG BELFAST SOLDIER'S HEROIC ACT.

One of the finest deeds published in connection with the British offensive in France must be placed to the credit of Private W. M'Fadzean, Royal Irish Rifles, a native of Belfast. He lost his life in a gallant attempt to save the lives of his comrades. Captain James M'Kee, in a letter to Private M'Fadzean's father, tells how the young hero died. He says:—"You will have great satisfaction in knowing that he died a hero's death. Our men were in the trenches, and bombs were being distributed. Your son had a box passed to him, and in the passing some bombs dropped out. In falling, the safety pins fell out; and your son, realising the danger to his comrades, flung himself on top of the bombs. He was killed, and two others were slightly wounded. He saved the lives of a number of his comrades by his action, and we are proud of him. His name has been sent forward to higher authority with recommendation for a decoration." Private M'Fadzean was only 21 years of age.

FIRE ON A STEAMER AT DUBLIN.

At a late hour last night a fire broke out on board the ss. Echo, of the Bristol Steam Navigation Co., which was loading a general cargo for Bristol at the South Wall, Dublin. The cargo included a valuable stock of whiskey, and also a quantity of malt combings. The outbreak was caused through the accidental upsetting of one of the lamps, which ignited the malt combings in the lower aft hold. The Fire Brigade was summoned, and the Tara street section, in charge of Captain Purcell, was promptly on the scene with a motor fire engine. At the request of Captain Purcell, some of the cargo was put back on the quay, and a line of hose was laid on, the flames being extinguished in a short time, and before they had obtained a hold on the cargo or the ship. The firemen had a somewhat difficult task, owing to the dense smoke in the hold.

Mr. Registrar Brougham at the London Bankruptcy Court yesterday approved a scheme of arrangement recently accepted by the creditors of Mr. Seymour Hicks, the well-known author and actor-manager, and directed the receiving order to be rescinded.

A Melbourne telegram states that the Minister of External Affairs, Mr. Hugh Mahon, will shortly take legal action against companies operating in Australia which have not complied with the precautionary regulations rendered necessary by the war regulating enemy shareholders.

HOW MAMETZ WOOD WAS CARRIED

DETAILED ACCOUNT OF FIGHTING.

FINE ARTILLERY AND INFANTRY WORK.

(FROM THE PRESS ASSOCIATION'S SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD, JULY 12th.

Mametz Wood is an irregularly shaped patch covering about 200 acres of the gentle slope, the ridge of which reaches the northern skyline at Bazentin-le-Petit, some half a mile beyond. It is a typical French bois, densely overgrown through two years' neglect of forestation. The great trees are not numerous, but between these are crowded 20 feet high saplings, and the ground is covered with waist-high growth, such as in peace time would harbour foxes, and, possibly, a wild boar or two. A single railway line runs through it, but as though conscious of its incongruity, with a very minimum displacement of verdure.

AN IMPERISHABLE LANDMARK.

This same Mametz Wood, unheard of by the world all the while it lay well behind the German front line, has now become an imperishable landmark in the story of the great battle of Picardy. It has been the centre around which has waxed some of the bitterest fighting of the struggle thus far. It was regarded as such a difficult position to tackle that I am not betraying any secret now when I say that the original plans did not contemplate any direct attack upon it, but a process of working around and getting across the communications, when the defenders would be soon forced to yield. Developments, however, served to demonstrate that the principal difficulty to these squeezing tactics was the resistance which came from the green stronghold itself, and so the scheme of attack was modified accordingly. Upon the progress of the early fighting which led up to the drive through Mametz Wood I propose to touch very briefly. During the night of July 2-3 the "pinching" tactics against Fricourt succeeded completely, and our troops pushed on right through the village, finding no Germans left in the deep and spacious dug-outs, but capturing a great quantity of stores and materials. Enemy machine guns in the Cemetery Cottage and the Chateau gave a good deal of trouble, and it was only after the artillery had been turned on to these places that they were stormed and taken. Incidentally, our men are unanimous in their tribute to the remarkable sighting of the German machine guns—a testimony which is the real token of good soldiers. The havoc wrought by our artillery was evidently extraordinary. It seems that all but two batteries ceased to fire upon the troops working towards Mametz Wood during the time to which I am referring. On July 3-4 the position was that our double advance around and beyond Fricourt had proved successful, and straightened their line through Bottom Wood and Shelter Wood, into the Valley, towards Montauban, establishing good positions at various points, and capturing a big haul of prisoners. During the 5th, Birch Tree and Shelter Alley were occupied after bombing fights. In the small hours of the 6th our positions having been steadily advanced by means of saps, we got the Quadrangle Trench. During the next three days progress was slow and somewhat of the give-and-take order, but as the net result we established ourselves in Marlborough and Caterpillar Woods, and posted machine guns at a strong tactical point, covering the north-eastern exit of Mametz Wood, in addition to successfully fighting our way into Pearl Alley Quadrangle Trench and Quadrangle Alley. I am giving all these names, though they are very likely to convey much to the average reader, but because there is really no other means of conveying an idea of the progress of our attack upon Mametz Wood.

APPROACHING THE WOOD.

At midnight on July 9th we took Wood Trench, which appears to have been the last success attempted in this particular region prior to the launching of the organised attack upon the wood itself, which resulted in our occupying all but a very narrow fringe of the northern portion of it. At 2.20 on Monday morning, the 10th, the German began a counter-attack against our position south-west of the wood. They had apparently increased their artillery, for the bombardment was very heavy, the guns and mortar "crumps" literally shaking the earth by their explosions. Our own gunners soon developed a hot response, and, although the enemy temporarily forced us from a point from the western corner of the wood, they did not succeed in maintaining a footing here, owing to a bombing attack, which cleared them out.

About three o'clock in the afternoon, under cover of an intense barrage, four British battalions debouched from the south-west of the wood, and establish possession of the Mametz Wood. One battalion deployed eastwards, another pushed straight for the centre of the wood, and the other two inclined westwards, where the stiffest opposition was anticipated. Many German corpses were encountered during the advance, which was found to be slow on account of the obstructive character of the growth and fallen trees. A great deal of desultory rifle fire was experienced, and machine guns began to rattle from several strong points amid the foliage, whilst the shells of the enemy artillery crashed incessantly betwixt the trees. The British battalions had aimed to begin their attack so as progressively to sweep the ground ahead of the advance; but, whether owing to a miscalculation, or whether in spite of the obstacles to which I have referred, the attacking infantry proceeded more rapidly than the lengthening of the fire, the fact remains that, so keen was the enthusiasm of the men, that they actually passed through and beyond the curtain of shells, not without casualties. With great promptitude the gunners were signalled to, and lifted the range on to the second line of German trenches.

GROWING OPPOSITION.

The opposition grew stronger as the assaulting battalions neared the northern edge of the wood, and at one time the advance was not only held up by sweeping squalls of bullets, but had to withdraw some three hundred yards. Here a reorganisation was effected prior to going on with the attack, and meanwhile our batteries concentrated intensely upon the spot whence this strong resistance proceeded. But this bombardment had failed to search out the marked machine guns. The second attempt to advance promised no greater measure of success beyond the recent holding up point than the first, and dusk found the men lined up along the railway, extending thence eastwards across the wood, about two-thirds the distance through it. In the early daylight the attack was renewed. Laden with bombs, the gallant troops plodded forward again in defiance of the machine gunfire, which, doubtless owing to the effects of our sustained artillery work, showed a tendency to slacken. A partly-made German trench, running within the northern cover of the wood, was reached and occupied, a shorter battalion rendering valuable service by improving the shelter and wiring. At the north-east apex of the wood a bombing party was able to penetrate into the open and establish itself under the protective fire of the machine gun emplacement to which I have previously referred, supported by a cyclist machine gun section.

This was Mametz Wood won to its furthermost confines, and at the time of writing our tenure of this important tactical position is stoutly maintained. For military reasons I am at present precluded from giving the names of the most valiant regiments which achieved this notable victory, but the will will not long be drawn over their famous titles. They sent to the rear a long and clay-caked procession of prisoners from the Wood, numbering, with the three heavy guns and a great howitzer standing until the hostile fire had slackened sufficiently to enable teams to be brought up to remove them. I have since heard that relief troops passing these same guns the following day have also claimed them as captured, and I suspect a few pleasantries will be exchanged upon the subject.

The taking of Mametz Wood brings our troops to a stage not within about 300 yards of the first trench of the second German line.

FIGHT FOR CONTALMAISON.

Meanwhile, whilst the struggle I have described was in progress, a fierce conflict had been proceeding for the possession of Contalmaison, for without Contalmaison in our hands Mametz Wood must have proved a costly spot to hold. Indeed, the ruined village had already been found a perfect honeycomb of Boche-excavated dug-outs, the inmates of which lay hidden until our men had entered the apparently deserted place, and then poured out, dragging machine guns and bags full of bombs in their wake. During the first attack, which began on the night of the 8th, and was carried over the small hours of the 9th, so heavy was the fire of the hostile artillery and machine guns, that only detachments succeeded in fighting their way into the place. Recognising that to endeavour to stay would merely be to court annihilation, they collected the prisoners and returned with these to report upon the situation. The second, and successful, attack was launched simultaneously with the assault on Mametz Wood, on Monday afternoon last, and, cover of a terribly and wonderfully effective progressive barrage by our guns, our men advanced into the village, meeting with comparatively little opposition. Others they found the remains of a German battalion and a German company, and some sharp bayonet work ensued. But the struggle was soon over, and the place is sustained. The enemy fled to the shelter of his dug-outs, whence ultimately 120 prisoners were gathered.

MUNITIONS AND THE GREAT OFFENSIVE.

ALL HOLIDAYS POSTPONED.

STATEMENT BY MR. ASQUITH.

The Prime Minister, in the House of Commons yesterday, appealed to the patriotism of the workers of the country, and the public generally, and asked them, in view of the great offensive, and the urgency of maintaining an adequate supply of munitions for the Army and the Navy, again to postpone all holidays until such date as might be announced by the Government.

The August Bank Holiday, he added, would be postponed by proclamation.

In the House of Commons yesterday,

Mr. ASQUITH, apologising for his absence at question time, said he had been detained at a momentous conference of the Allies. It will, he proceeded, be within the recollection of the House that all holidays during June and July were postponed, in view of the urgent military requirements of the moment. I have to acknowledge on the part of the Government the very full response made by the workers of the country to the appeal which I made to them on the subject on the 31st May last. In making that appeal I suggested that the postponed holidays might, subject to military exigencies, be taken at any time after the end of July. Since the date of that statement a great—and I think I am entitled to say a very favourable—change in the military situation has been produced by the Allied offensive. That offensive is only in its beginning. It necessarily requires for its successful fulfilment a great and continuous supply of munitions of every kind. (Cheers.) An ample supply is now, happily, available, but the daily consumption is enormous. From the success achieved we are able to gauge the paramount necessity of avoiding even the slightest risk of restriction in the use of munitions in the field, not merely in the weeks immediately before us, but until our objective has been fully achieved. In the opinion of the Commander-in-Chief, there must be no slackening of output even for a moment. I have, therefore, to make an appeal to the patriotism of the workers of the country and the public generally again to postpone their holidays, in order that the attack which has been so brilliantly begun may be carried through to a triumphant conclusion. In the circumstances, after fully considering the matter from every point of view, the Government has decided that it is essential, in the national interest, that there should not be any holiday, either general or local, until such subsequent date as may be announced. Though there is the most obvious urgency in relation to the supply of munitions for the present offensive, there is an equally real urgency for every class of munitions for the Navy as well as the Army, and for the production of all materials and means of these munitions.

A GREAT SACRIFICE.

In coming to this opinion, the Government did not under-rate the sacrifice thereby demanded of the men and women, some of whom are already overstrained—(hear, hear)—by long and continuous work. It is clear, in any case, that where health requires it, leave of absence will be given to individuals. Further, the Government make themselves responsible for the assurance that the holidays are merely postponed, and, not abandoned, and, as soon as military exigencies permit it, all postponed holidays shall be given in full. The Government is of opinion that the days which would otherwise be holidays should be treated as ordinary working days, and that any privileges in regard to special pay should be carried forward to the new holiday period in lieu of the postponed holidays. The August Bank Holiday will be, as before, suspended by proclamation. The Government are inviting the whole of the Lord Mayors, Mayors, and Lord Provosts and Provosts throughout the country to take steps to secure this in every locality. The Ministry of Munitions and the Admiralty are arranging to meet representatives of the workmen and of the employers immediately in order to secure co-operation in giving effect to the decision of the Government. I have no doubt as to the result of their appeal. No greater service can be rendered to the country by the workers and the country to the forces in the field than to give the latter the encouragement, and our enemies the discouragement, of the certain knowledge that the present intensity of the bombardment and assault will, if necessary, be continued indefinitely. (Cheers.)

MR. LLOYD GEORGE AND THE SUPPLY OF MUNITIONS.

Mr. Lloyd George, addressing a Conference on Munitions yesterday morning, at which representatives of the Allies were present, said the Munitions Conference held in London there has been a considerable change in the fortunes of the Allies. At that date the Champagne offensive in the west had just begun to attain its objective, and the French and British Armies had sustained heavy losses without the achievement of any conspicuous success. In the east the enemy had pressed the gallant armies of Russia back hundreds of miles, and the Balkans had just been overrun by the Central Powers. I need not dwell upon the improvement which has since that time been achieved in the fortunes of the Allies. The overwhelming victories won by the valiant soldiers of Russia struck terror into the hearts of our foes, and those victories, coupled with the immortal defence of Verdun by our indomitable French comrades, and the brave resistance of the British troops against overwhelming odds in the Southern Alps, have changed the whole complexion of the landscape, and now the combined offensive in the east and west has wrenched the initiative out of the hands of the enemy, never, I trust, to return to his grasp. We have crossed the watershed, and now victory is beginning to flow in our direction.

OUR PROSPECTS.

It is relevant to the object of this conference to inquire why our prospects have improved. The answer is the equipment of our armies has improved enormously, and is continuing to improve. When we met last the Russian armies were facing a hailstorm of iron with flesh and blood. The British troops were condemned to unforeseen inactivity because our munitions were not equal to sustained attack, and although France had bestirred herself early in the campaign, and under the guidance and inspiration of M. Thomas had achieved prodigies in the way of equipment, still even her resources were inadequate to the task in front of her. In this country we were in process of adding to old factories and setting up new ones. We had ordered the machinery with which to fill them. But few of these factories had then been erected, and not one of them was completed for work. I think it right to point out at this juncture that the Navy until recently absorbed more than half the metal workers in this country. The task of building new ships and repairing old ones for a gigantic Navy, and fitting and equipping them, occupies the energies of a million men.

WHAT HAS BEEN ACHIEVED.

At the beginning of the war the Army numbered a few hundred thousand, and our arsenals and the equipment of the Army were in proportion to its size. We had, therefore, to create out of next to nothing arsenals to provide munitions for the huge Army now in the field. Most of our new factories are now complete, and most of the machinery has been set up. Hundreds of thousands of men and women hitherto unaccustomed to metal and chemical work have been trained for munition making. Every month we are turning out hundreds of guns—heavy howitzers, light, medium, and heavy, our heavy guns are rolling in at a great rate, and as for ammunition we are turning out nearly twice as much ammunition in a single week, and that is more, nearly three times as much heavy shell as we fired in the great offensive in September, although the ammunition we expended in that battle was the result of many weeks of accumulation. The new factories and workshops we have set up have not yet attained one-third of their full capacity, but their output now is increasing with great rapidity. Our main difficulties in organisation, construction, equipment, labour supply, and readjustment have been solved.

A WAR OF EQUIPMENT.

If officials, employers, and workmen kept at it with the same zeal and assiduity as they have hitherto employed our supplies will soon be overwhelming. The fact that, after months of most appalling and unceasing expenditure of ammunition at Verdun, France has still a sufficient reserve to conduct an independent offensive on a considerable scale, is the best proof of the additional efforts. I cannot help thinking that the improvement in Russian ammunition has been one of the greatest and most unpleasant surprises our enemy has sustained, and we know the efforts Italy has put forth, and the happy results of these efforts in the recent struggle in the Alps. Still our task is but half accomplished. Every great battle furnishes an additional proof that this is a war of equipment. More ammunition means more victories and fewer casualties.

To finish the job with the needs of the Allies, and ended:—"These are the main problems we have to consider at these conferences. We must help each other to a solution by mutual effort. Let us speak thoroughly the requirements of the various Armies. Let us help each other to supply these requirements. Victory anywhere means victory everywhere."

PARLIAMENT.

one orderly to look after them. Officers, men, and native soldiers were mixed up together, many with shattered limbs, and there was not a bit of morphine or chloroform among the lot. One officer did not have his wounds dressed from the time he was picked up to the time he got to Bombay. He could give hundreds of other instances. But he had been asked not to speak further on the subject. It was the most disgraceful state of things he had ever heard of. Who was to blame God knew, but there was someone to blame. (Cheers.)

LORD CREWE.

The Marquis of CREWE said that since the noble viscount last raised the question he had been in consultation with more than one of his colleagues on the subject. He must thank the noble lord for having acquitted him, personally, of any desire, or, indeed, even of any toleration, for undue procrastination or delay in this matter. It was evident from what had fallen from the Duke of Somerset that the feelings of the House in that House and out of it, were deeply stirred by what they had heard. (Cheers.) As the noble viscount, no doubt, anticipated, he was not able to make any statement that afternoon, but he could say this: as the result of his conversation with his colleagues, he understood that the Prime Minister would make a statement in regard to the papers on Tuesday in the House of Commons, and he would ask the noble lord to allow him to make one on the same day. The Prime Ministers statement, and also his own, would apply to another subject than the one which had raised so much interest—viz., the papers regarding the Dardanelles operations. He had noted the point made by his noble friend as to whether it was possible to draw a distinction between papers which might be regarded as dangerous to publish, and those which dealt with questions of supply, transport, and medical service. He would inquire whether it was possible in fact to draw a distinction.

LORD SALISBURY.

The Marquis of SALISBURY remarked that, in order that their lordships might be under no misapprehension, and even that the Government found they could not publish the papers on Tuesday, he could hold out no hope that the debate would be soon resumed. Feeling had got to such a pitch that a debate of that kind was really inevitable. Anyone who had listened to the noble duke would see the kind of things that were being said far and wide throughout the country. One of the circumstances to which the noble lord had alluded took place on 14th or 15th of May, so that it was not old history, but a contemporary event. These things might turn out not to be true, but the Government must face the fact that, unless they were willing to come out into the open and tell the country the facts, these sort of things would go on being said. If these things were true, the sooner they were exposed the better, in order that the severest measures might be adopted, and steps taken to see that they did not occur. (Cheers.)

The House adjourned at 8.45.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—Thursday.

The SPEAKER took the chair at 2.45.

THE DARDANELLES AND MESOPOTAMIA.

Sir HENRY DALZIEL asked the Prime Minister whether he could inform the House of the reason for the delay in the publication of the Dardanelles papers.

Mr. BONAR LAW (replying in the temporary absence of Mr. Asquith) said that the Prime Minister would make a full statement on this and the Mesopotamia question on Tuesday next.

Sir EDWARD CARSON—May I ask if the House will have the opportunity of discussing the statement? (Hear, hear.) Because we really want it, as the country ought to get it.

Mr. BONAR LAW—I will put the representation of my right hon. friend on the Prime Minister, and I am quite sure if the House desires to discuss the statement it will have an opportunity of doing so.

CIVILIAN PRISONERS IN GERMANY.

Lord ROBERT CECIL, questioned by Mr. Malcolm regarding his last proposal to the German Government on the treatment of British civilian prisoners at Ruhleben, said that the substance of the German reply had been received. The German Government categorically repudiated the charge made by H. M. Government that they did not propose to supply food to British prisoners of war, and that assertion that less food was supplied to civilian prisoners than military prisoners. They stated that at the request of the British Government they had sanctioned despatch of collective parcels of food to British prisoners on condition that such consignments should not contain predominance of such commodities as were only obtainable to a limited extent by Germans themselves in consequence of the British blockade. If by way of reprisal the German Government proposed not only to withdraw the provision as to collective parcels, but also to prohibit the receipt of individual parcels. The German Government declared themselves as not averse to the proposals communicated to them for the release of all British civilian prisoners of war, but they considered that this should take place on the basis of the release of a similar number of German prisoners, up to such exchanges and to meet counter insurmountable difficulties in regard to the selection of the prisoners to be released. He did not quite understand the last part of the paragraph, but it appeared to mean that we should release all German civilian prisoners in exchange for British prisoners. To this His Majesty's Government proposed to reply that they could not accept the proposal to reply that all Germans interned in this country, as that would be to send back 28,000 Germans in exchange for only 4,000 British. The proposal proposed by the German Government that all those over 45 who were unfit for service in the field, with certain exceptions. This proposal they would be glad to entertain with a full discussion with press upon the German to the number of persons detained should not exceed twenty on each side.

Sir WILLIAM BYLES—May we take it that the policy of reprisals is abandoned?

Lord ROBERT CECIL said that as the House of Commons should not arrive at any such conclusion. The Government held themselves free to retaliate if that appeared to be the only way to secure justice for our prisoners in Germany. (Cheers.)

DUBLIN PORT AND DOCKS.

Mr. FIELD asked the Home Secretary whether he will arrange that under the Defence of the Realm (Acquisition of Land) Bill the Dublin Docks Board properties should not be exempted from such provisions, as already granted in favour of commons, parks, and recreation grounds.

Mr. SAMUEL—The matter will be dealt with by a Government amendment to the bill, of which notice has been given.

RE-ELECTION OF MINISTERS.

On the motion for the second reading of the Re-election of Ministers Bill,

Sir A. B. MARKHAM moved that it be read a second time this day three months. He said he had no objection to the bill so far as it related to the Secretary of State for War, but could not, for the life of him, understand why the present Attorney-General (Sir F. E. Smith) should be spared the necessity of going through the ordeal of a re-election. His constituents had a right to express their views as to the policy of the Government in connection with the war.

Mr. ASHLEY seconded, but disclaimed himself from the attack which had been made on the Attorney-General.

Sir EDWARD CARSON said that his only regret was that the bill was not made to apply generally to all members taking office. It would, in his opinion, be an outrage if the Minister of Munitions had to go, as this crisis, and take part in a party by-election. The position of registration at the moment made it still more impossible that a proper election could take place at this moment. Absolutely no blame whatever attached to the Attorney-General. If anybody had any grievance in the matter it was himself, as he ought to have been drawing his salary all the time—(laughter)—but he willingly gave up his claim, which could, after all, only be based on the fact that the Government had not discovered a very microscopic point. (Laughter.)

Mr. ASQUITH said the whole difficulty in the present case had arisen through the House of Commons, in May of last year, passing a bill, which it expressly limited in its operation to the months of May and June of 1915. He thought the House would agree that it would be a very ungenerous thing in regard to the Attorney-General not to pass such a measure.

On a division, there voted—

For the second reading—156.
Against—None. (Laughter.)

The bill was read a second time, passed through Committee, and was read a third time.

FINANCE BILL.

The House again went into Committee on the Finance Bill, which was recommitted in respect to Clause 52.

The clause having been negatived,

Mr. McKENNA moved a new clause relating to the limitation of relief from income tax in respect of insurance premiums, which provided that the relief given under Section 54 of the Income Tax Act, 1853, shall not be given at a greater rate than that of 3s. in the £; that it shall not be given for the purpose of the super-tax; that it shall not be given as regards insurance contracts for deferred annuities, where no capital sum is payable at death.

After some observations by Sir Thomas Whittaker, Mr. Jonathan Samuel, Mr. Stuart Wortley, and others, the clause was read a second time, and ordered to be added to the bill.

The bill, as amended, was ordered to be reported to the House.

The House adjourned at a quarter to eight.

WAR OFFICE AND WOOL SALES.

The Army Council last night give notice that they authorise and permit the purchase, sale, or other dealing in wool pulled before September 1st, 1916, from the skins of sheep which have been slaughtered during the season of 1916. The notice exempts rubbings pulled before September 1st, 1916, from the prohibitions of purchase and sale of British and Irish wool. It does not exempt from the prohibition combings or loog wool pulled from the skins of sheep or lambs which have not been clipped during 1916.

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE.

BANK RATE 6 P.C. TEXTILES ACTIVE. DUNLOPS AND MARCONIS LOWER.

DUBLIN, THURSDAY EVENING.

The Bank of England official discount rate was raised from 5 to 6 p.c. to-day, after standing at the former rate since the 8th August, 1914. The Bank of Ireland has likewise fixed the rate at 6 p.c., while the allowance on deposits has been increased by ½ p.c. to 3 p.c., after remaining at 2½ p.c. since 27th January last. The effect of dearer official money had naturally a quieting effect on investment support, and prices of the Funds gave way all round. Banks were very firm, but most of the shares were marked ex- dividend without actually changing hands. Munsters were keenly bid for, and rose ¼ to 6¼ bid, but did not offer. Bank Stock and Nationals were steady at last prices. Among Marconis, the Ord. were weaker at 67s., 66s. 9d. ex. dividend 1s. a share. The Pref. fell 9d. to 55s. 9d. Home Rails were idle, but with a steady undertone. Great Southern and Western Ord. rose ¼, and the Debs. 1. Provincial Tramway Ord. were apparently scarce, and advanced no less than 1s. 6d. to 18s. 6d. Dunlops were less firm on realisations. Parent Tyre Ord. fell 1½d. to 21s. 3d., the Def. 9d. to 26s., and Dunlop Rubber Ord. 6d. to 51s. Humber Ord. rose 9d. to 15s. 9d. Todd Burns Debs. rose 1s. to 77s. Textiles show increasing strength in most directions. Coats Ord. relapsed ⅛ to 6¾ on sales to secure profits. Burke Pref. were 1s. higher at 92s. 6d. x.d.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

SIX PER CENT. BANK RATE.

Bank Rate (changed July 13, 1916) ..... 6 p.c.

The Bank rate was advanced to 6 p.c. yesterday morning from the 5 p.c. level at which it had stood ever since August 8th, 1914. The advance was at first regarded as the prelude of another further increase in Treasury bill selling rates, which would, of course, increase the cost of financing the war, but in the afternoon it was announced without a rise in Treasury bill rates could be avoided, and it was hinted quite plainly that this would take place to-day. The discount market was rendered more or less nominal by the change in the official minimum, and there was little business in the remittance of the existing Treasury bill rate, and quotations for the latter were entirely nominal. Short loans are still to 6 p.c. There was a sufficiency of funds in the loan market, Stock Exchange loans were arranged at 4 to 4½ p.c., and weekly fixtures at 4½ p.c. The clearing banks advanced their rate for deposits at notice by ½ p.c., while joint stock and private banks filled their deposit allowance by 2 p.c. to 4½ p.c. for money at call and 24 p.c. for money at 7 days' notice. Only a slight tightening of conditions and some slackening of rates at New York yesterday, the New York exchange advanced slightly to 4.76.

The Silver market showed renewed strength. The quotation for bar silver is 35 7-16d. per oz. on absence of important selling and further Indian and Mint support.

The total value of cheques cleared through the clearing banks during the past week was £439,639,000, against £340,561,000 in the previous week, and £289,141,000 for the corresponding week a year ago.

The Bank of England announced that £75,000 had been released from Egyptian account.

The movements in value of the exchange were in favour of this country, the Scandinavian, Russian, Spanish, and Italian currencies all depreciating.

LONDON STOCK MARKETS QUIET.

DEAR MONEY EFFECTS. AMERICANS FIRMER.

(FROM OUR FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, THURSDAY.

The advance in the Bank rate naturally reacted adversely on the Stock Exchange. The rise is regarded as introductory to a period of generally firmer monetary conditions, which may continue until the end of the war. Dearer money has the effect of drawing investment support away from the Stock Exchange, and will also, presumably, cause an advance in contango charges on the remaining pre-war speculative commitments, though these are not large enough for a rise in the terms on which they are financed to materially affect the general situation. Practically the whole of the domestic groups tended downwards. Among gilt-edged Securities, Consols receded ¼ to 60¼. The 3½ p.c. War Loan at 89 3-16 was 9-16 down, while the 4½ p.c. Loan lost ¼ at 96 9-16. There were fresh falls ranging up to ½ among Indian Government issues. Bank of England Stock held its ground, and Irish Land Stock at 57¼ was only a small fraction down. Port of London Debs. gave way ½. There were many fractional irregular changes among Colonial issues, but falls predominated.

FOREIGN BONDS QUIET.

In the Foreign market, Russian Fives were offered back ¼ to 91½, but the Fours, after some hesitation, closed ¼ to the good at 72¾. Several Japanese quotations eased off ¼ to ⅜. Argentine and Brazilian Securities showed fractional irregularity, with falls of ½. Brazilian Funding Fives fell ¼ to 82½. Peruvian Pref. lost ½, and the Debs. ¼, while Egyptian Preferences held firm, and the Unified Loan was ¼ higher.

HOME RAILS LOWER.

Home Rails displayed early unsteadiness, which later developed into a pronounced downward movement. There were many falls of ½ to ¾ among the Trunk and Trade Stocks. North-Westerns at 108½ and Great Westerns at 101¾ were each a point lower, but there was an exceptional advance of a point to 100 in South-Western Ord.
